

CFW: SpeedRun – Episode 1

The screen flickers on with a pulsing timer graphic, glitchy overlays flashing across the words: SPEEDRUN. The Foundry is stripped down — no banners, no spectacle, just a hot crowd and a hungry ring.

Chaz Del Rio (voiceover):

“Welcome to SpeedRun — where tomorrow’s stars step up, and every second counts. No frills, no filler, just prospects fighting for their shot at the big stage.”

Bert McDaniels:

“SpeedRun is all about opportunity. One roll, one win, and your career trajectory changes. Lose? You regroup, you come back, you fight again. It’s quick, it’s raw, and it’s the future of CFW.”

The crowd cheers as the camera cuts around the room, fans pounding the guardrails.

Chaz:

“We’ve got a loaded slate tonight — fresh faces, high energy, and prospects clawing their way toward the main roster. Let’s not waste a second... it’s go time.”

Faze vs. Danny Virgo

Faze came out hot, dazzling the crowd with his high-flying bursts, but Danny Virgo grounded him fast. Using slick technical control, Virgo slowed the pace, wore Faze down, and never let him back into rhythm. One quick counter into a tight cradle sealed it.

Winner: Danny Virgo

Mira Steele vs. Lola Rose

Both women impressed in a fast-paced showcase, trading big moments and earning the crowd's respect. In the end, Lola Rose pulled ahead and scored the victory, capping off a crowd-pleasing match.

Winner: Lola Rose

Ben Delaware vs. Gunner Wade

Ben Delaware showed flashes of fight, but this one belonged to Gunner Wade. Strong, confident, and in control from the opening bell, Wade dominated the pace and put Delaware away without much trouble.

Winner: Gunner Wade

Main Event – Axel Graves vs. Alaric Green

Axel Graves came out swinging, showing flashes of real potential and nearly pulling off the upset on several occasions. But the veteran instincts of Alaric Green carried the day — he weathered the storm, found his opening, and put Graves down for the count.

Winner: Alaric Green

After the main event win, Alaric Green cuts a post-match promo. He looks right into the camera, mentions Reign Rökk, and directly accepts the challenge Rökk made earlier on Black Light. That locks in their collision course.
