

 CFW: SpeedRun – Episode 4

 [Quick open. The Speedrun logo flashes.]

Chaz: Welcome to Speedrun — where we spotlight new and exciting prospects in CFW, all at full throttle! Every week's a chance to see the next breakout star, and tonight's no different.

He nods toward the ring as the crowd buzzes.

Chaz: In our main event, a familiar face returns — Lola Rose is back, looking to keep her momentum rolling right here on Speedrun!

 [Music hits — first match on deck.]

Nico Blaze vs. Ben Delaware

The crowd was hot from the bell, and Nico Blaze gave them a show. Delaware tried to match speed, but Blaze was a blur — hitting crisp dropkicks, sharp counters, and a rope-run moonsault that had The Foundry shaking. Every near-fall brought the energy higher.

Blaze sealed it with a springboard enziguri into a clean Blaze Bomb for the pin.

Winner: Nico Blaze

High speed. High spots. Pure crowd-pleaser. Blaze looked every bit like a breakout waiting to happen.

Sawyer Creed vs. Faze

The Foundry crowd was split right down the middle — chants for both wrestlers echoing through the walls. What followed was a high-energy showcase of grit and timing. Creed's power met Faze's explosiveness in a string of near falls that had fans on their feet.

After a tight back-and-forth stretch, Faze ducked a clothesline and landed a Code Faze out of nowhere for the three-count.

Winner: Faze

A statement victory and his first win on Speedrun.

Main Event

Lola Rose vs. Jade Vierra

The Foundry was buzzing before the bell — pure love for Lola Rose. From the start, she fought with heart and fire, using speed and precision to offset Jade Vierra's raw power. Every time Jade threw her down, Lola popped back up, firing off dropkicks, roll-throughs, and near-falls that had the crowd rallying behind her.

But the size difference became too much. Jade caught Lola mid-springboard, spun her into a crushing Emerald Driver, and scored the three-count.

Winner: Jade Vierra

A tough loss for Lola, but the Foundry still roared her name. Her fight earned respect — even in defeat.

Chaz: You can feel it, Bert — this crowd loves Lola Rose. She gave everything she had tonight. Jade Vierra may have walked away with the win, but nobody here's walking away thinking any less of Lola.

Bert: Not at all, Chaz. She fought like hell out there. The size difference was massive, but she never backed down. That's heart — that's what the Foundry's all about.

Chaz: Exactly. This isn't a setback; it's a step forward. You can see it in the fans — listen to them! They're on their feet, clapping, chanting her name. They know what she's capable of. Lola Rose might've lost tonight, but she won over everyone in this building.

Bert: And something tells me, Chaz... this is just the beginning for her

Chaz: What a night it's been here on Speedrun! We've seen new faces, big moments, and a whole lot of heart — but before we go, I've got one last piece of news. On the next Black Light, Alaric Green will be in action... and he's got a surprise debut opponent!

Bert: Oh, that's huge, Chaz!

Chaz: You don't want to miss it, folks. Whatever's coming, it's got the Foundry buzzing already. We'll see you on Black Light!

[SpeedRun ends]

