Episode 3: "Common Ground"

Night hangs over The Foundry.

Behind the building, away from the roar of the crowd and hidden beneath the warm glow of aging industrial lights, rainwater clings to cracked pavement. A black sedan sits parked in the alley.

Leaning against it is Brandi Blight, dressed in a tailored black suit. Hands tucked into her pockets, expression unreadable.

Standing beside her is Gale.

The two are already in conversation.

Gale

"I don't know, Brandi... this feels different."

Brandi remains silent.

Gale

"You've always had a plan... but lately..."

She lets the thought trail off.

Brandi never breaks eye contact.

Before either woman says another word...

The sound of approaching footsteps cuts through the quiet.

Both women turn toward the mouth of the alley.

A figure steps beneath the streetlight.

Selina Santorino.

Selina strolls to within a few feet of the pair before stopping.

Her eyes settle on Brandi.

Selina

"That shit you pulled on Black Light..."

A beat.

"Leaving me out there to eat the pin?"

Gale instantly straightens, every muscle tightening.

Her eyes lock onto Selina.

Selina notices.

She chuckles.

Selina

"Relax."

"If I wanted a fight... you two would've known before I walked over."

The tension eases only slightly.

Selina shrugs.

"Truth is... that's exactly why I hate tag teams."

"Sooner or later somebody decides they're looking out for themselves."

She smirks.

"Can't even be mad at you."

Her eyes stay on Brandi.

"You made a business decision."

"Hell..."

"I'd have done the same thing."

She wrinkles her nose with obvious disgust.

"You weren't trying to save me."

"You were trying to stop... her."

"Lena."

The name practically tastes bad coming out of her mouth.

"I get it."

"That little fraud's got everybody fooled."

"Always crying bully..."

"Always playing the victim..."

"Meanwhile she's the most selfish person in that locker room."

Selina shakes her head.

"I want another shot at her."

A slow smile creeps across her face.

"And judging by the way you look at her..."

She studies Brandi for a moment.

"You don't just hate Lena."

"You want to kill her... expose her."

Selina smiles wider.

"I gotta admit..."

"Watching that happen sounds like a hell of a good time."

She folds her arms.

"Do I trust you?"

"Not even a little."

"I despise tag teams."

"But I hate liars a whole lot more."

"I see what you see."

"Every time she opens that mouth..."

"...another thousand people buy the little victim act."

She scoffs.

"Let's end it."

"Let's expose her."

"One match."

Then Brandi...Nothing.

Not a word.

Just that unreadable stare.

Then Gale, after a long silence.

Gale

"One match..."

She looks over at Brandi. Brandi never moves.

Gale lets out a slow breath.

A long silence settles over the alley.

Selina's eyes drift from Gale... back to Brandi.

She gives the slightest nod.

Selina

"Good."

A faint smile tugs at the corner of her mouth.

"I'll let you know when."

Without waiting for another word, she turns and walks back toward the mouth of the alley. Brandi never moves.

Gale watches until Selina disappears beneath the glow of the streetlights.

For a few steps, Selina's expression is perfectly neutral. Then...

A slow grin spreads across her face.

Not satisfaction. Something darker. She never looks back. The grin lingers as she disappears into the night.
