

Creative Force Wrestling
Ink & Iron
Episode 3: "Common Ground"
Written by: Savior Hawkins & Bluesteeler

Night hangs over The Foundry.

Behind the building, away from the roar of the crowd and hidden beneath the warm glow of aging industrial lights, rainwater clings to cracked pavement. A black sedan sits parked in the alley. Leaning against it is Brandi Blight, dressed in a tailored black suit, hands tucked into her pockets, expression unreadable. Standing beside her is Gale.

The two are already deep in conversation.

"I don't know, Brandi..." Gale says. "This feels different."

Brandi remains silent.

"You've always had a plan... but lately..."

She lets the thought trail off.

Brandi never breaks eye contact.

And before either woman can say another word...

The sound of approaching footsteps cuts through the quiet.

Both women turn toward the mouth of the alley.

A figure steps beneath the streetlight.

Selina Santorino.

Selina steps out of the premium vehicle Vanessa arranged for her, the door closing behind her with an expensive, muffled thud. She strolls toward the pair waiting in the alley — unhurried, comfortable, the walk of someone who has never once doubted she belongs anywhere she chooses to be — and stops a few feet short of them.

Her eyes settle on Brandi with a flat, annoyed look.

"That sh*t you pulled on Black Light..."

A beat.

"Leaving me out there to eat the pin? You've got a lot of f*cking nerve to pull what you did to me. I already HATE tag teams — and then I've got Miss Obsession over here leaving me out to dry, while I'm the one carrying your bum ass through a two-on-one scenario for the MAJORITY of the match."

Gale instantly straightens, every muscle tightening, her eyes locking onto Selina.

Selina notices.

She chuckles.

"F*cking RELAX."

A pause.

"If I wanted a fight... I would've let you two bums know that before I walked over. I am not ruining this designer outfit — that costs more than both of you bums combined by a continent mile — for some petty little fight."

The tension eases only slightly.

Selina shrugs.

"Truth is... that's exactly why I hate tag teams. Depending on a bum who decides whether or not you can win a match? Such a stupid f*cking concept. It's a format made for bums who can't hold their own."

She smirks.

"Honestly? I can't even be mad at you."

Her eyes stay fixed on Brandi.

"You made a business decision. At my expense — sure. But I'm actually not too annoyed about it."

A beat.

"I'd have done the same thing."

She wrinkles her nose with obvious disgust.

"Because you weren't trying to COMPETE out there. You weren't trying to win. You were trying to STOP... her."

"Lena."

The name practically tastes bad coming out of her mouth.

"I get it. That little f*cking FRAUD has got everybody fooled with her pathetic little story." Her voice sharpens with contempt. "Always crying bully. Always playing the victim. She's the most SELFISH person in that locker room."

Selina shakes her head.

"I want another shot at that crying victim bum."

A slow smile creeps across her face.

"And judging by the way you look at her..."

She studies Brandi for a moment.

"You don't just HATE Lena. You want to KILL her. Expose her."

Selina's smile widens.

"I'll admit... seeing that — and having the Influencies watching it happen — sounds like AMAZING content to my eyes and ears."

She folds her arms.

"Do I trust you? F*ck no. I DESPISE tag teams. But I hate liars and bums who play Miss Victim so bad a WHOLE lot more."

Her gaze holds steady on the two of them.

"I see what you see. Every time she opens that mouth... another thousand people buy the little victim act."

She scoffs.

"So let's end it. Let's EXPOSE that little fraud. One match."

Then Brandi...

Nothing.

Not a word. Just that unreadable stare.

Then Gale, after a long silence, speaks.

"One match..."

She looks over at Brandi. Brandi never moves.

Gale lets out a slow breath. A long silence settles over the alley.

Selina's eyes drift from Gale... back to Brandi.

She gives the slightest nod.

"Good."

A faint smile tugs at the corner of her mouth as she pulls out her phone and texts Vanessa to come pick her up.

"I'll let you know when."

Without waiting for another word, she turns and walks back toward the mouth of the alley.

Brandi never moves. Gale watches until Selina disappears beneath the glow of the streetlights.

For a few steps, Selina's expression is perfectly neutral. Then...

A slow, sinister grin spreads across her face. Not satisfaction. Something darker.

She never looks back. The grin lingers as she disappears into the night — and slides into the premium vehicle waiting for her at the curb.

