

BLACK LIGHT LIVE — Episode 26

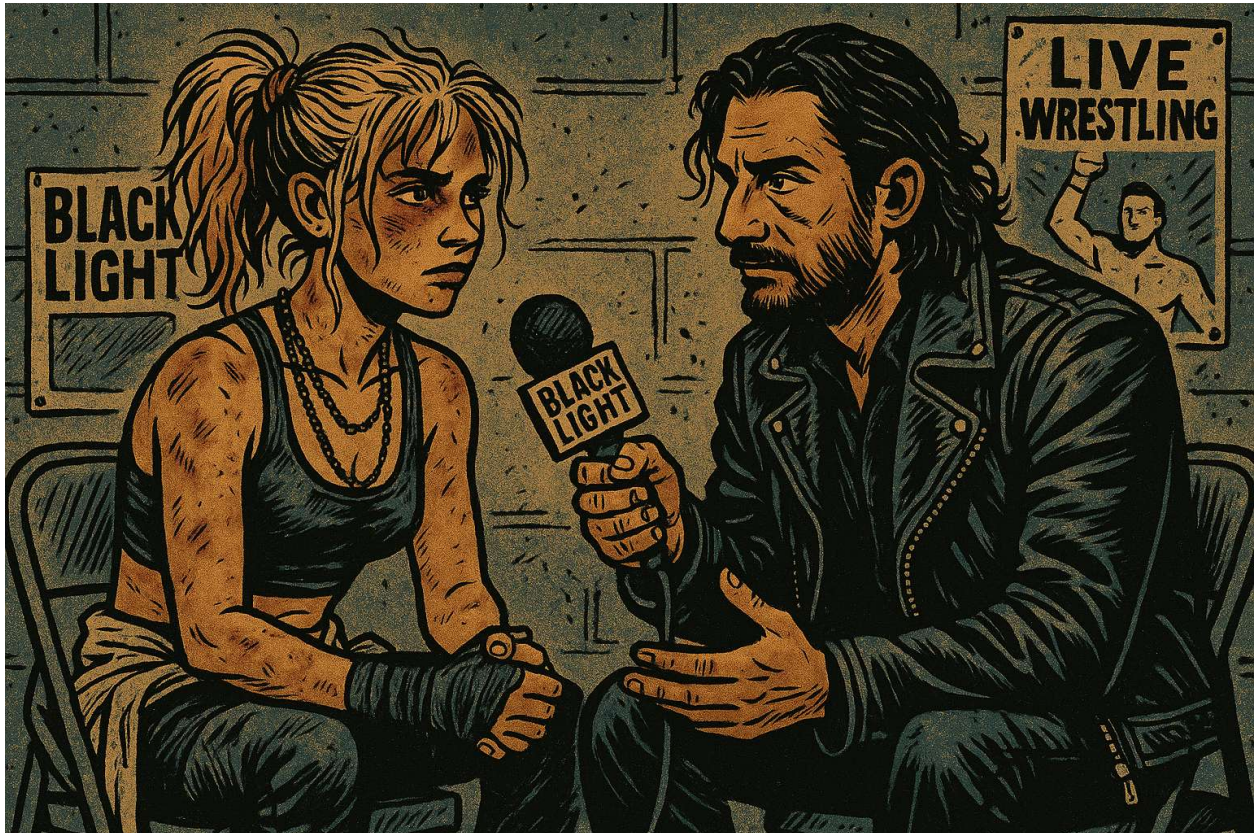

Live from The Foundry

Venice, Florida

[Cold Open — Backstage Interview Area]

The camera fades in on a dimly lit locker-room setup. Chaz sits across from a focused, guarded Lena Wilde.

Chaz: Thanks for joining me, Lena. There's a lot to talk about — but we'll leave the elephant in the room for last. Your win at Crossroads has got to give you the momentum you were looking for. I'm not speaking for myself, but others had started to count you out in this points battle that's been raging on. Scoring your first point in the gauntlet match... how much pressure are you feeling going into Run It Back to catch up with Sudio and Brandi?

Lena: (voice low, focused) Chaz, of course I feel pressure. I think that was obvious at Crossroads. Look, I got overcome with emotion. This battle for the number one contender spot has taken its toll — all of it has. The matches, the mind games, dealing with Brandi...

I mean, whatever elephant in the room you're talking about doesn't matter. What matters is I've got another opportunity at Run It Back. That's all I need.

Chaz: I believe it. You've proved it time and time again — when people count you out, you dig in and fight harder. You've got heart, Lena, and everyone here at The Foundry knows all you ever need is an opportunity.

(pauses, softens tone)

But sometimes, opportunity comes with its own challenges. I want to ask about your friend, Sudio. It's been clear watching Black Light that you two have each other's backs. You've fought side by side against Brandi and Gal, matching them blow for blow through all their cruel, unrelenting tactics.

But in that gauntlet match... you looked conflicted after pinning Sudio to win. However, some have said you didn't look as conflicted when you hit her with the Bleed Out DDT—

Lena: (cuts him off) Of course I was conflicted! What you saw was a raw battle in that ring — that's what all four of us signed up for. You think I enjoyed hitting Sudio like that? You think I wouldn't be conflicted?

You didn't see me crying in the middle of the ring, Chaz? (she exhales, slightly annoyed)

Chaz: Lena, I understand... So — the elephant in the room. The one everyone's buzzing about... is Brandi Blight.

On Black Light, we saw her interacting with Vanessa Vale — and later, watching the Black Tape. And as you know, most of those who've seen that tape haven't exactly been the same since. Do you think it'll have any effect on the Fatal Four Way at Run It Back?

Lena: (with sarcasm) You're asking me my thoughts on a "cursed VHS tape"?

(she sighs) My thoughts are I've got real things to worry about. Brandi's ruthless, conniving... (pauses) evil.

She's all of that without some gimmick. I think it's bullsh!t, Chaz. How about that?

Chaz: I understand, Lena. Just... be careful. I've seen things around that tape that I can't explain. I'm always rooting for you — and I know The Foundry is as well.

Friday, October 24th — Run It Back. A second Fatal Four Way Match: Lena Wilde, Sudio, Shayna Vex... and Brandi Blight.

(The tension hangs heavy in the air. Chaz looks uneasy. The camera slowly pans back toward the crowd at The Foundry as the intro theme hits.)

[A pulse of static cuts to the “RUN IT BACK” graphic — Águila Feral vs. Dominic Hex. The Foundry’s crowd noise hums beneath a deep bass tone.]

Voice-over (Bert):

“At Run It Back, the storm’s about to hit. Águila Feral — the relentless predator of CFW — steps into the ring with Dominic Hex, the undefeated enigma who’s left nothing but wreckage in his path. Feral’s looking to end that streak... and Hex plans to make him regret trying.”

[The screen flashes green and fades back live inside The Foundry — the crowd buzzing. The camera pans across the arena as the commentary desk comes into focus.]

Bert: Folks, we’ve got something special for you tonight. Alaric Green has been chasing down Dominic Hex’s undefeated streak for weeks, trying to prove he’s the man to end it.

Chaz: He’s not the only one, Bert. Green and Reign Rokk have been locking horns lately, both staking their claim for a shot at the top. But neither of them can be too happy that Águila Feral gets that opportunity at Run It Back.

Bert: That's right, but tonight, Alaric Green's got a different kind of challenge — and it's one he didn't see coming. A surprise opponent making his first appearance here in CFW, but no stranger to these fans.

Chaz: Oh yeah, the Foundry faithful know this man well. A veteran who's traveled the road, earned his respect the hard way... and tonight, he steps into a new chapter.

Bert: It's poetic, Chaz — Green made his CFW debut at Crossroads as an established star out to make a statement. Now the tables have turned. Tonight, “North Star” Josh Conway gets that same opportunity — to make his mark at Green's expense.

[Crowd noise swells as the lights dim and Alaric Green's entrance music hits.]

[The camera sweeps across the electric crowd as Alaric Green marches to the ring, focused and ready.]

Bert: Alaric Green looks ready for a fight, Chaz. He's been on a mission to stay in that top tier, to keep his name in the conversation with Hex and Feral.

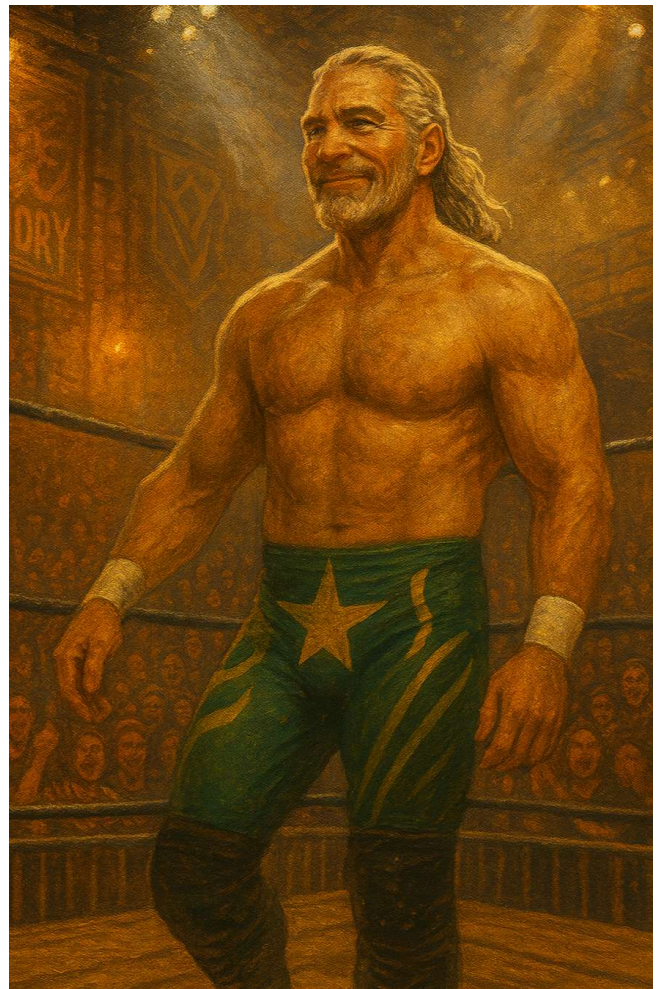

Chaz: No doubt about it. Green's been clawing his way toward the top since Crossroads, chasing Hex and trying to remind everyone who he is. But tonight's about the man waiting behind that curtain.

Green rolls his neck, pacing in the ring. The lights dim to black. The crowd begins to buzz.

🎵 “Plowed” by Sponge hits.

The Foundry erupts. A white spotlight slices through the haze as “North Star” Josh Conway steps into view — a warm grin cutting through the steam. He gives a nod to the fans and makes his walk to the ring, soaking in the reaction.

Bert: The Foundry faithful giving a hero's welcome to the North Star, Josh Conway. A veteran who's seen it all, done it all, and still has something to prove.

Chaz: You said it, Bert. Nearly thirty years in this game — Conway's built his name on heart, respect, and a knack for bringing the best out of everyone he steps in the ring with.

[Conway climbs into the ring, pacing the ropes as the crowd chants "NORTH STAR! NORTH STAR!" Green stands tall in the corner, eyes locked on Conway.]

Chaz: Two veterans. Two different paths. One night to prove who still burns brightest inside The Foundry.

[Camera circles the ring as the referee steps in — tension rising before the opening bell.]

Alaric Green vs "North Star" Josh Conway

The bell rings and there's a low rumble through The Foundry — the kind of energy that feels like the start of something special. Alaric Green circles first, his eyes locked and unblinking. Conway paces lightly on his feet, loose shoulders, a half-grin as the crowd starts a soft "North Star" chant that builds with every step.

Green takes early control, using his size and strength to slow the pace. He corners Conway, punishing him with short forearms and knees to the ribs — methodical, mean, almost testing how much the veteran's body can take after decades in the game. A crushing back elbow sends Conway to the mat.

Bert: "You can feel Alaric wants to make a statement tonight."

But Conway's not one to fade quietly. He fights from his knees, firing palm strikes to Green's midsection, rising with a sudden burst — whip to the ropes, tilt-a-whirl backbreaker! The crowd comes alive. Conway, still winded, hits the ropes again and lands a handspring back elbow that drops Green flat. The cheers swell, rhythmic now — North Star, North Star!

Green powders to the outside to reset, but Conway keeps the momentum alive — a slingshot cross body to the floor brings the Foundry to its feet. He lands on one knee, clutching his side, but flashes that knowing smile — the kind of look only a veteran gets away with.

Back inside, Green regains control with sheer brute force. He counters Conway's next rush with a powerslam that rattles the ring. A back elbow follows, then a brutal lariat that nearly turns Conway inside out. Green leans over him, barking something inaudible, his face red and sweat-drenched under the hot Foundry lights.

Conway refuses to stay down. He drags himself up using the ropes — breath heavy, eyes glassy but focused. Green charges again, but Conway slips behind, German suplex! He holds on, the crowd roaring, hits a second one! He rolls through, looking for a third — two amigos! The crowd erupts as Conway lifts him for a double chicken wing gutbuster!

Both men are down — exhausted, breathing heavy, sweat flying with every movement. The Foundry is on its feet now, stamping and chanting. Conway's hands shake as he pulls himself into the corner, staring out at the roaring sea of faces that have followed him his whole career.

Chaz: "It's like muscle memory takes over. Every scar, every ache — it all fades. This man lives for these moments."

[Back in the ring — Conway's in full control. The Foundry is thundering as he fires up with a burst of offense: a spinning heel kick, a corner dropkick, and a crisp Saito suplex that rattles the boards.]

Bert: Conway's got momentum here! The North Star shining bright in his debut!

Conway takes a deep breath, eyes burning with focus. He backs into the corner and starts to stomp — one beat, two, three — the rhythm spreading through the crowd as they clap along.

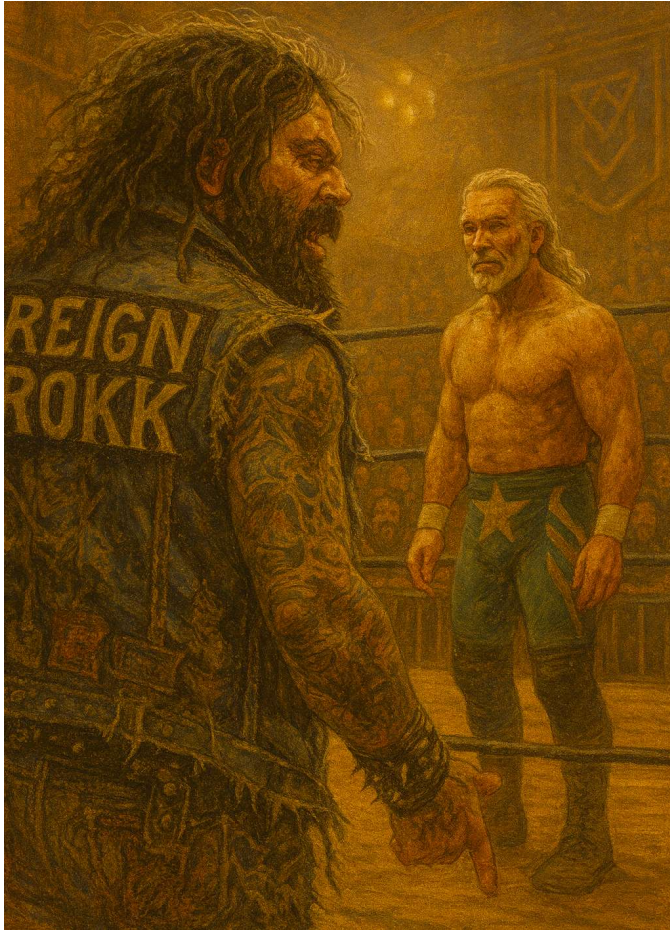

Chaz: *He's setting up for it, Bert — he's lining up True North!

Green staggers to his feet in the center of the ring as Conway slaps the top turnbuckle —

Reign Rokk's music hits.

The crowd's cheers turn to a confused rumble as Rokk steps through the curtain, jaw set, eyes locked on the ring.

Chaz: What is he doing out here now?

Bert: Rokk and Alaric Green have been in battles lately — both scraping and clawing for a chance at Hex! We've speculated that neither man could be happy with Feral getting the shot at Run It Back!

Chaz: I get that, Bert — but why now? We're in the middle of a match!

Rokk walks slowly down the ramp, the crowd unsure whether to boo or cheer. His gaze never leaves Josh Conway, who turns to meet it — cautious, watchful.

The referee leans over the ropes, yelling for Rokk to leave ringside. Conway keeps his eyes on Rokk... and that's the opening Green's been waiting for.

[Green slips in behind Conway, driving a boot between the legs — a vicious low blow, unseen by the ref.]

Chaz: Come on! Behind the referee's back!

Green quickly rolls Conway into a small package. The referee drops for the count — oblivious.

Bert: No! Not like this!

Referee: ONE! TWO! THREE!

Winner: Alaric Green

[The bell rings as Green rolls out of the ring, smirking through the pain. Conway clutches his midsection, furious but hurting. The crowd boos loudly as Rokk stands at ringside, arms crossed, staring into the ring at Conway.]

Chaz: Alaric Green just stole one, and Reign Rokk made it happen!

Bert: Intentional or not, Rokk just cost Josh Conway his debut win — and you can bet The North Star won't forget it!

[Green backs up the ramp with a grin, Rokk still at ringside. Conway kneels in the ring, glaring out at both men as the camera lingers on his expression — frustration, pain, and defiance — before fading out.]

[Black Light ends]